point where we can pause and look about us. Though not old, we have attained an age where, already, when we visit the beautiful God's acre of our native town, the familiar names upon the headstones increase year by year; and as we walk about there we say to each other "Did you know he was gone?" or "Thad forgotten she had been called—so young, too," and then, as we look again, we see that it was not so young after all, but that it is only we who have forgotten how we are aging, and how the companions of our youth have aged also, or already passed away. Looking back, this antumn afternoon, through all these housekeeping years, how softened, yet how radiant becomes the picture with its mingled light and shadow. There were the days when sickness became a familiar visitant, when the grim shadow of death hung over the as. Though not old, we have attained an shadow. There were the days when the struggle to do so much with so little seemed useless to be kept up any longer. There were the days when sickness became a familiar visitant, when the grim shadow of death hung over the household, but happily always passed us by. We have not grown rich; no mechanic with a family to support does that, but we have constituted a happy household of loving hearts. Our story is only that of thousands of other families, the heads of which fill our workshops and factories, and make up the bone and sinew of our cities and villages, while the wives and mothers toil just as hard to make the homes bright and comfortable. There is no reason why any young man and woman, blessed with health and employment, should not keep house comfortably on the wages usually paid to mechanics.

"All the world loves a lover," and old married people, like Elnathanand I, have still enough sentiment left in our hearts to bless and welcome every young couple starting a home in our midst. But, my dears, before commencing your venture, be sure you love each other so devotedly that no pressure of poverty, no deprivation or self-denial, made necessary by your base before commencing your venture, be one sentenced in the state of the sake of acquiring some great good, or preventing some great ill, patiently bear with manners and customs, so that each kind of religion has its place in the State. For the same reason her, of the sake of States, who for the sake of sequiring some great good, or preventing some great sone, of States, who for the sake of sequiring of States, who for the sake of sequiring of States, who for the sake of sequiring some great good, or preventing some great ill, patiently bear with manners and customs, so that each kind of religion has its lose not candem them has a state. For the same reason home, and the search laws of God, and puts away the bedefined due to legitimate power, for this is license rather than liberty.

On the other hand, that liverty is always and to be sought, which, if it be nnaily extending into my ness, room wainer came a yellowish discharge very offensive in character. It was also inflamed, and annoyed me a great deal house of a friend, who so strongly recommended the use of Swift's Species that I determined to make an effort to procure it. In this I was success'ul, and began its use. The influence of the medicine at first was to somewhat aggravate the sore; but soon the inflammation was alayed, and I began to improve after the first few bottles. My general health has greatly improved. I am stronger, any face began to decrease and the ulcer to heal, until there is not a vestise of it left only a little scar marks the place where it had been. I am ready to answer all questions relative to this cure.

Miss. Joine A. McDonald.

Atlanta, Ga., August 11, 1885.

Altania, Ott., augins as your and the for some years, extending from one check bone across the mose to the other. It has given me a great deal of pain, at times burning and itening to such an extent that it was almost unbearable. I commenced using Swift's specific in May, 1985, and have used eight bottles. It has given the greatest relief by removing the inflammation and restoring my general health. that no pressure of poverty, no depriva-tion or self-denial, made necessary by your limited means, can ever make you grow cold or fault-finding toward each other, or nothing but the utmost trust and confidence in each other will carry you through. It will be a veritable bearing of name in each other will carry you through. It will be a veritable bearing of each other's burdens. The housework will be hard, the going without things you need will be hard, the care of children will be exacting and wearing to the last degree; but all these may be borne, nay, more, may be met and overcome for each other's sake. But, oh! the woeful failures I have seen, the cases where the wife, young and undissiplined, chafed and fretted under the inevitable burdens that she had assumed, voluntarily it is true, but with no conception of their real gravity and magnitude, still wishing for freedom and admiration of her girhood days, feeling the care of children an intolerable burden; or the husband, equally undissiplined, suffrey unfit to maintain the honor and dignity essential to the head of a household, seeing no reason why he should curb the expenses or to the head of a household, seeing no reason why he should curb the expenses or habits he indulged in before marriage. Then indifference has turned into recrimination, to be followed by separation, and two lives have been marred and ruined; fortunate, indeed, if there are no little ones to be quarreled over, or left to the mercy of relatives or strangers.

These things ought not to be. We, who have borne the burden and heat of the day, who have built up homes and trained up children, have a right to protest and advise. Nay, we have more, we have a duty to do. We should so encourage these young aspirants for matrimony and housekeeping, we should so show them housekeeping, we should so show them by our being and doing the beauty of true living, that they will think there is noth-ing else worth striving and toiling for.

DUTIES OF CITIZENS. The Pope then speaks of the duty to conform one's life and manners to the precepts of the gospel and continues: It is also of great importance to give attention to the duties of citizenship; in this regard most particularly, with that concern which is righteous among Christians to take pains and pass effective measures so that public provision be need for the to take pains and pass effective measures so that public provision be made for the instruction of youth in religion and true morality, for upon these things depend very much the welfare of every State. Besides, in general, it is useful and honorable to stretch the attention of Catholic men beyond this narrow field, and to embrace every branch of public administration.

A wish to take no part in public affairs would be in that degree vicious, and would be attended with danger to the Christian name, because they would be-come most powerful who are badly dis-posed towards the church; and those least powerful who are well disposed.

Therefore, it is evident there is just cause for the Catholics to undertake the conduct of public affairs, for they do not assume these responsibilities in order to approve of what is not lawful in the methods of government at this time, but in order that they may turn these very methods, as far as may be, to the unmixed and true public good, holding this purpose in their minds, to infuse into all the veins of the Commonwealth the wisdom and virtue of the Catholic religion—the most hearty sap and blood, as it were. powerful who are well disposed.

Dr. J. E. SMITH, No. 1404 Chapline Street,

The best evidence of a physician's success is the testimony of his patients. The increasing demands for my professional services prove that I have dealt honorably and fairly with those who have consulted me. I never use a patient's name without permission, though I have many hundred certificates from those whom I have entred after they had been pronounced incumble. A thorough medical education with many years hospital experience and familiarity with therapute agents, a close observance of temperamental peculiarities and strict stiention to hygienic management insures success.
